Foreword

In this mirror that hangs in the drawing room of our college, we see reflected the older Hollins girls whose memory is inspiration. We, too, are reflected in it as living presences; "Our sorrows have dimmed it and our joys have lightened it." Lest the shadowing of our experiences fade, the 1926 Spinster Staff leaves this volume

The Green and the Gold

(Words by Phoebe Hunter, 1909. Music by Alma McConihay, 1910.)

I.

O fair maiden Spring, what hue will you bring
To our cause from your own sunny sheen?
You have brought for your part the hue nearest your heart,
And spread Hollins' hillsides with green.
And you, frosty Fall, the most brilliant of all,
What color for us do you hold?
You have laid your fair hand with its torch on our land,
And set our trees flaming with gold.

II.

The Green and the Gold, we have loved it of old,
And to it we will ever be true.
For the memory will last of the days that are past,
And linger, dear Hollins, with you.
For life, when we're young, is a song that is sung,
And must pass as a tale that is told,
But honor and praise, to the end of our days,
We will render the Green and the Gold.

III.

And still at the thought of the good she has wrought,
Each heart must with gratitude thrill—
So to Hollins we'll sing 'till the mountainsides ring,
Our jewel of woodland and hill.
There are true, loyal friends that our college life lends,
And treasures of life manifold,
And may kind fortune bless with eternal success
Our Hollins, the Green and the Gold.

"Through the Looking-Glass"

Over my desk there hangs a copy of Raphael's The School of Athens. Often—very often—as I sit and look at it, it almost happens that I can stand on the marble steps, under the arches of that Grecian temple and can actually hear the swift, eager words which fly from one brightly-robed figure to another. And what a goodly company of ancient Greeks it is! The lure of all the riddles asked by Nature and by Man has permeated those walls, and back and forth fly the finely-taken questions and answers concerning the nature of the earth, the stars, of Man, and of God. Thinkers, these men are, entered upon the great Adventure of the Mind, attempting to look full at life, "to see it steadily and see it whole." There are among them those who hear the Music of the Spheres, and those who thrill to the dance of the atom; those who run at the call of Pleasure, and those who are sober at the voice of Duty; one who says, "Come up from the world and seek to know perfection," and one who says, "Know thyself."

This was the School of Athens, several centuries before Christ. And yet no age down the long vista of ages past is so like in spirit and in attitude toward life to our own. To both life holds out a great challenge to reason; minds become winged and seek the farthest parts of the universe in an effort to know. Both have rejected the guidance of tradition and authority and have become scientifically-minded, critical; satisfied only by probing and investigating, experimenting and testing; straining to hear all the smallest voices of the earth and to understand them.

Each year at Commencement, as the Seniors stand on the steps of the Hollins Library, I am reminded anew of the group on those other steps. Here, as there, there are brightly-robed figures, among whom swift questions have flown back and forth; here also are those who have heard the Music of the Spheres, and those who have thrilled to the dance of the atom. We are one with the School of Athens in our philosophy of adventure, in our passionate desire to find out for ourselves. And yet, there is one vast difference between the School of Today and that group of early thinkers gathered in the temples of Greece, or walking on Grecian shores and under Grecian skies: they were far more truly pioneers even than we; or certainly in a sense in which we can never be. For the paths which they blazed were in virgin forests of thought; it was a wholly new thing then to seek to understand, and behind their frontiers there was a meager store of supplies for the adventure. Nevertheless, they set forth on a quest for truth which has been carried on for two thousand years, sometimes under strange leaders and into strange fields. And now modern Youth stands, fired by the same passion for truth which is freedom, the heir of all these intervening ages, with a social and intellectual heritage comparable neither in quality nor in quantity to any other.

It is this inheritance which makes the great difference between the two ages, and I often wonder if our eager pushing of the mind forward and upward would not be made even more warmly satisfying than it is if we would take comprehensive stock of this inheritance. It is a great reservoir of wealth, if not as a source of authority, as a record of the emerging of the human race from the hand of God—and therefore as an explanation of ourselves. Emerson says, "I can find Greece, Asia, Italy, Spain and the Islands—the genius and creative principles of each and of all eras in my own mind;—there is properly no history, only biography." And Goethe says that the philosophy of every man and of every age depends largely upon the door by which life is entered. To know ourselves, then, will involve an understanding of the doors which have been flung open for us and of those who have flung them open. For our age, with its questioning, courageous curiosity, is, in this sense, a mirror in which even the School of Athens is reflected. To gain any real, live values from being "an heir of all the ages" it is required that we slip through, as Alice did, into the Looking-Glass House where the pawns are all alive. "First, there's the room you can see through the glass plainly—that's just about the same as our own room only the things go the other way." But beyond, it is quite different.

But, you will say, the golden glories of the old are only fallen leaves about the feet of the young—what we want is not tradition but inspiration. And Goethe answers, "We must all receive and learn from those who were before us. . . . To speak the truth, what had I that was properly my own save the ability to see and hear, to distinguish and to select, and to enliven with some wit what I had seen and heard, then to interpret it with some degree of skill? I, by no means, owe my works to my own wisdom alone, but to a thousand things and persons . . . that provided me with material. . . . All told me what they felt and thought, how they lived and worked and what experiences they had gained, and I had but to put out my hand and reap what others had sown for me."

It is this ability to see and hear and thus to put out our hands and reap what has been sown for us which alone makes us heirs of all the ages in any true sense. Those who have eyes, yet not the ability to see, can do no more than move about under the protection of reforms, employ machines, and express dogmas, all of which were at one time private opinions, then dreams, then struggles. Truly to inherit a thing, whether it be a system of student government on a college campus, a theory of gravitation, or an automobile, it is required that we imagine "intensely and comprehensively," that we grope with searching tendrils of the imagination into the soul where it was once a dream and a vision,—that is, where the truth of it lies. Those who enter thus through the looking-glass find, as Alice did, that it is "oh, so beautiful!"—and tradition becomes inspiration.

And what can we do with this inheritance, granted that we are able to grasp it? The surging spirit of adventure, of Youth, the winged desire to push ever forward and onward, forbids us to accept as final the experiences of other souls as they stand reflected in the life about us. Nevertheless, one never comes back from the looking-glass world without a feeling that he has been treading on holy ground. Ordinary things are no longer ordinary for they contain the dreams of the ages. We become gentler and less ruthless; more thoughtful of our own contributions, knowing that they will live after us; and more grateful to those of other times, knowing that "we could not reach the goal which we have set except we travel o'er the road which they have laid."

I cannot but wonder each Commencement as a new group of Seniors prepares to take its place in the Looking-Glass House of Hollins history, how many of those for whom they have builded will come back and visit with them! For the things which have been accomplished are only a small part of the inner stirrings, the plans and visions which lie back of them. All these have gone into the making not only of the story of Hollins, but into that longer story of Adventures in Thinking begun back in Athens, centuries ago where the School of Today was founded; and as Hollins girls each year join this long and illustrious procession of fellow-adventurers, at the far end of which stand the pioneer figures in the Grecian temple, I can hear them voicing the cry of each age as it bequeaths its inheritance, "Guard you the dreams of the Dreamer."

MIRIAM McCLAMMY.

Supplication

I

*I stood within the flood of light
That poured, a flame of molten amber,
From the sun and slanted through the sky
To fill the purple rim of hills.
Lord, the earth is a cup held up
For us to catch thy glory in.
Lord, my hands are lifted high;
Fill them with thy holy flame.*

II

*Beneath the shining stars, I watched
Their crystal light transfuse the earth,
Until the mists that wrapped the hills
Were cloaks of silver, finely spun.
Lord, my soul is caught in mystery;
Touch it with the beauty of thy night.*

SARAH MIDDLETON.

Class History

ONCE upon a time, a young giant, becoming tired of all the things that giants usually do, and being of a scientific turn of mind, found a telescope and began to focus it on earth. It was in September, 1922, that there came to his view a group of buildings in a hollow. There was a great deal of commotion going on; the giant didn't exactly understand, for he was not very well educated, so he called his mother to ask her about it. She was busy at the time, so she said in a very short manner:

"Oh, those are girls down there. What? The black speck? That's an automobile. Don't be silly. It's a college, not an ant hill. How very ignorant you are." And she went back to her work.

But the young giant wasn't satisfied, so he kept looking and looking through the telescope to try and make out something more.

The automobiles kept driving up, and before they had stopped, hords of girls threw themselves upon them, and he heard shrieks of "Be a red," or "Be a blue." Altogether it was very puzzling. The creatures as they stepped from the car would be clutched by those who were waiting as though they were going to be killed, and then they would all hop up and down like mad people.

By and by the giant noticed some of the creatures that stood apart from the rest, either singly or in small groups. They were very quiet and seemed to be rather uncomfortable.

"They don't understand either," he thought. "I shall watch them and perhaps I can learn with them what it is all about." So he did.

In a very few minutes, according to giant time, he saw that the quieter creatures had become more at ease, but some of them behaved very queerly. They seemed to be continually weeping. The giant felt very sorry for them. But on the whole, things were going quite well, in fact the giant had almost dozed off when he was awakened by a most terrific racket. He opened his eyes wider than ever and saw hords and hords of the once meek creatures marching and singing,

"We are the flappers, Flappers are we,"

It sounded a harmless enough song, but it seemed not to be the thing to do, for suddenly a swarm of bold creatures descended upon the band, and a terrific fight occurred. The giant had never seen anything like it before, even in giantland, and he was afraid that the whole population would be exterminated. The fight lasted so long that it bored him, and he yawned and when he looked again, everything had quieted down, and his especial proteges were very meek once more. In fact they seemed almost too meek. He saw them try to "scramble like an egg," or "bloom like an idiot" before a crowd of derisive onlookers, and he said, "What fools these mortals be," and went to sleep in disgust.

When he woke and looked through his telescope, it was, by a strange coincidence, September again. Everything was the same as when he first began to look at the creatures except that those who were then so ill at ease were now quite at home and seemed not to care who knew it. They clutched at people with extra frenzy, seeming to enjoy the orgy the more because they had missed its delights before. There weren't so many of them this time but that didn't lessen their order any and when after some time the giant heard them sing,

"The Seniors think that we Are cute as we can be,"

he smiled a little.

There was another lull in the life of the little place, and then it revived again as the giant had seen it do before. The same things happened, the same cries of "Be a red" and "Be a blue" arose. "I wonder they don't get tired of it," he thought. A group of creatures looking pleased with themselves, but this time his own particular ones were, though they had decreased considerably in size, bustling around in a motherly fashion. They really looked more important than they had felt the year before. They seemed, too, to be together more and he often heard shouts of,

*"We're the merry Junior Class.
Ha, Ha, Ha, Ha."*

saw them trudging out on picnics, and going around looking as if the weight of the world lay upon their shoulders. The most momentous occasion came when he saw them become invested in long black robes, and funny square hats. Even the giant was thrilled when they sang,

"We are the Seniors Seniors are we,"

though he couldn't in the least see why this should make them so happy.

The giant has taken another nap and wakes to hear one of the creatures say, "Yes, our class certainly has seen a lot of changes, why when I was a Freshman—" whereupon he smiled and went to see if his dinner was ready.

SUE R. THOMAS, '26.

Aunt Anne's Anecdotes

(Being Also Incidents of Interest to Irritated Infants)

FOREWORD:

IT HARDLY seems possible that twenty years ago I was a learned Senior in cap and gown and that all (oh, well, most all) of my classmates were just as learned. The only thing that A.B. signifies is that it's the beginning of the alphabet. I recite it now, the whole thing, A, B, C, D, etc., to all my little nieces and nephews by courtesy along with the ensuing jingles. You see, a virulent old maid like myself must be amused somehow, so my erstwhile classmates are kind enough to invite me to visit them and look after their children. In the interim of visits I jot down these spasmodic, meterless ditties for the delection of the darlings, and in return they call me "Aunt Anne." It's wonderful. I expect I'd better add, too, that I'm the only old maid. The events in my rhymes occurred either before, after, during, or simultaneously with matrimony, but interfered with it in no wise.

"AUNT ANNE."

There was a young lady named Burke
In whom a fondness for sailors did lurk,
So she set out to sea—
A captain to be,
Of her duties ne'er did she irk.

Pussy cat, pussy cat, what do you hear?
A radio broadcasting loud and clear.
Pussy cat, pussy cat, who talks so greatly?
It's Carolyn Bush, she never stops, lately.

When President Rose Budd ruled the land,
She ruled it very well.
She'd "shush" her learned cabinet
When she had aught to tell.

There once was a lady, as I've heard tell,
Who worked very hard, churning butter to sell.
She lived on a dairy farm, way, far away
And she was Jean Clymonts, most strange to say.

Dr. Coon went down to Boone,
Of cloudy weather fame.
But as she did grope,
Found an isotope,
Which won her a chemical name.

Mary Ballad, the walking one,
Learned to walk when she was young.
She led us hiking day by day
Over the hills and far away.
And now that she is old she can't sit still,
But keeps on going down dale and uphill,
And many a prize she's won, if you please,
By walking from the Nile to the Euphrates.

Martha Gore and Hasseltine, they were two bonny lassies.
Both of them went upon the stage, where a large part of our class is.
They sing and dance, gain much applause, a winning team are they,
Flowers and candy are sent to them almost every day.

When there's a fire in Hamilton, Ohio,
The good fire chief they bring.
A lady she, apt as can be—
To Dot Griffis let us sing.

Mittycum, Mottycum, Mitts,
Marie Hagoods' lost her wits.
In every play, up 'til today,
She's always been a man.
Now she thinks it's really so—
To the asylum she must go.
There to dwell until she is well,
Relieve her, pray, who can.

Liz Hall's an old woman who lives in a college,
She guards so many girls she's near lost her knowledge.
For she is the Dean, a kind, motherly soul.
To kiss all good-night is ever her goal.

In Washington, D. C.
Is a bank big as can be.
A lady is the banker, and all the people thank her
For none is so good as Hardesty.

One misty, moisty morning,
When it was very foggy,
I chanced upon a lady
Who seemed to be quite groggy—
As I am blest
It was Celeste.
She fell in a trance
With St. Vitus' Dance.

Virginia Kinnier had very red hair.
She dyed it one day, as I do declare,
And now she is a nun and never is seen,
For her hair once so red, in very bright green.

Gay go up and gray go down.
Now we're off for Chicago Town.
And where shall we dine when there we stay?
At Russell Kennedy's new cafe.

Hey, diddle diddle,
The cat and the fiddle,
And who is this, I pray?
It's plain to see,
'Tis Louise Lee,
She models for Altman, they say.

The poor benighted Hindu
No longer makes his skin do.
Almira's there
To comb his hair
And tell him what he kin do.

There was a social worker
Who uplifted all she saw,
She made the children brush their teeth
And wash each little paw.
"You must be clean, dear children,
And bathe, lest you die early."
And this kind lady, gracious friends,
Was Josephine Lyerly.

Little Queenie Flinders
Sits in the cinders,
Scrubbing many a pot and pan.
Her face is very black—
Oh, alas and alack,
Imagine it, anyone who can.

There once was a girl who sang every breath,
Dot Mac she was, may we ne'er hear her death.
Now she's on the stage
And they say she's all the rage,
But no longer does she sing, but acts Macbeth.

Ho jerry, hi jerry,
What's become of Dorothy Merry?
Early and late
She governs her state,
In Georgia we now like to tarry.

Dot Nunnemaker
Is a lady Quaker,
From Industry she craved a rest.
Though all uplifters love her,
She waits 'til the spirits move her,
E'er again she makes them blest.

"Limelight Lou" is Pully, now,
An actress rare, I vow—
Charlestons each night
With all her might—
To see her they all go,
And the house is "S. R. O."

Very sad to relate,
There's another inmate
Of the asylum in our class.
Marie Ragsdale is groggy,
She thinks she's a "doggie,"
Alack, oh, alack and alas.

Edna Roberts, a matron, is
In a orphan home.
They love her so, they never go
Out in the world to roam.

Pavlowa's place is taken,
The dancing world is shaken—
Who is this new and shining sun?
A girl we know full well,
And her praises loudly tell,
Tommie Saunders, this brilliant one.

A designing lady is Kate Schoolfield,
And lays full many a plan—
For girls she has sporty Triangle Togs
As well as clothes for the well-dressed man.

Poor Martha Jane Spence
Has lost all her sense,
From bugs to buggy she went.
'Twas taking Zoo
That did it, you know.
Oh, Zoo, what a way to give vent.

Hiddlety, tiddlety, tod,
Who heads the policewoman's squad?
'Tis Margaret Stone,
Bless her every bone,
For she rules with a gentle rod.

Sue Rivers Thomas, sing high, sing low,
Is a writer of novels, oh ho, oh ho.
Kissed and Forgiven, the title of one,
Loved and Left, is a source of fun,
But the one that won the Hearst first prize
Was Barbara Bunting's Dangerous Eyes.

Diddlety, diddlety, dool,
Who heads the reformatory school?
Oh, occupants rejoice,
'Tis Thompson, Frances Boyce.
Sing diddlety, diddlety, dool.

Ding, dong, dell,
Ring the funeral bell.
Zeigfeld Flo Zeigfeld's passed away,
He died of grief, they say—
F. E. Thompson's put his "Follies"
In the shadow with her "Jollies."

Purple, blue, orange and green,
Ruth Thompson's on the movie screen,
And strange to tell, my little man,
She plays the part of Peter Pan.

A rose by any name, I hear,
Would cost as much, be just as dear,
So names are doubtful blessin's.
But Mary Liz Tune lives up to hers
By giving singing lessons.

Margaret Tynes was in our class
And she was wond'rous wise;
To see her walk so absently
You'd think she had no eyes—
But she had eyes I know full well,
She spied an electron rare,
Converted it to status quo—
(Of Chemists we've a pair).

Cock-a-doodle doo.
Dot Webb where are you?
I'm coach of basketball
At good old Fairfax Hall,
Social Director, too,
So cock-a-doodle doo.

Da-da Williams, old and gray,
How do you pass your time away?
Darning hose for Ruth and Van
And making cakes for the church when I can.

Billie Wilson takes the place
Of Mr. Spalding now.
Her specialty is hockey sticks,
She makes them well, I vow.

There was a jolly magnate—
A coal magnate, she
Who unearthed all the coal there is,
Systematic as can be.
And pray, oh pray, oh pray who
Can this magnate be?
Her name is Adna Howell, Adna
Howell, it is she.

Sing, sing, what shall I sing?
Of Grand Opera, now. It's quite the thing.
And who pray, plays the part of Carmen?
Margaret Henderson and oh, but she's charmin'.

Oh, Margaret Lowe, she plays so well,
Rivals Paderewski, as I've heard tell,
She tours the world in pomp and state—
She has become both rich and great.

Mary Monroe, I must relate,
Had a very lurid fate.
A wicked stage vamp—such is she,
And out Theda's Theda that used to be.

A-hey and a-ho and a-hi-hi-hee,
Another great singer now we see,
Marguerite Spencer is all the rage
Upon the Classic Concert stage.

The two Misses Garrett, not unwary,
Have started a ladies' seminary,
And they are oh, so strict and firm
From the very beginning to the end of the term.

Spurned has our Page the operatic stage,
Life holds better things by far,
And now you see, a drum major she,
Who drums her troops to war.

A famous poet's a thing apart,
Sing hiddleton, diddleton, biddleton,
But there is one lives in our heart,
And she is Sarah Middleton.
She writes verses as free
As Libertec,
And so me all tightly bound,
But she's a great poet we've all found,
Sing hiddleton, diddleton, liddleton.

ANNE LONG, '26.

The Pan-Hellenic Creed

We, the undergraduate members, stand for good scholarships, for the guardians of good health, for wholehearted co-operation with our college ideals for student life, for the maintenance of fine social standards, and for the serving, to the best of our ability, of our college community. Good college citizenship, as a preparation for good citizenship in the larger world of alumnae days, is the ideal that shall guide our chapter activities.

We, the fraternity alumnae members, stand for active, sympathetic interest in the life of our undergraduate sisters, for loyal support of the ideals of our Alma Mater, for the encouragement of high scholarship, for the maintenance of healthful physical conditions in the chapter house and dormitory, and for using our influence to further the best standards for the education of the young women of America. Loyal service to chapter, college, and community is the ideal that shall guide our fraternity activities.

We, the fraternity officers, stand for earnest and loyal work for the realization of these fraternity standards. Co-operation for the maintenance of fraternity life in harmony with its best possibilities is the ideal that shall guide our fraternity activities.

We, the fraternity women of America, stand for the preparation for service through the character building inspired in the close contact and deep friendship of fraternity life. To us fraternity life is not the enjoyment of special privileges, but an opportunity to prepare for wide and wise human service.

New Lamps For Old

A PEASANT who attended Wordsworth's funeral is reported to have said at the close of the ceremony, "Well, I suppose his son will inherit the business now." He expressed an opinion prevalent in his time concerning the common method of choosing a vocation. But it is a far cry from this period of sons following fathers in business, and daughters following mothers in the gentle arts of living in carefree leisure, or the more distasteful arts of making the most of nineteenth century inconveniences. We have discovered that sons who inherited their fathers' businesses usually managed them badly, if at all. We have seen boys sent through their father's law schools, only to revert to farming or some other chosen field, when the first opportunity offered. Modern youth chooses its own ways of self-expression. Although a few paths for the development of individual personality and its expression have always existed, the modern college provides new lamps which reveal in a flood of light a network of alluring pathways, with signposts on the way.

Recent scientific experiments in applied psychology have opened a new field of interest in the study of individual differences. Each year brings some new tool for the testing of mental capacities and special abilities, and some new knowledge of the results of the permutations and combinations of inheritance strains in the mental make-up of our population. With such a technology we are able to explain why people excel in certain kinds of work in preference to others, and increasing measure, we are able to give scientific assistance to people in the choice of vocations and avocations.

Coincident with the development of an increased knowledge of the diversity and range of people's capacities, has come a realization of the economic wastes attendant upon misapplied energy. From the conservation of natural resources, economists have turned our attention to the conservation of human resources. All phases of human welfare, but especially the economic phases, necessitate a careful apportioning of the human resources of any population to obtain an increasing social product. Round pegs in square holes mean wasted energy for which a high economic price is paid, to say nothing of the human costs. The nation-wide movement for vocational guidance in the schools, colleges, universities, and for the adults already in the great industries of our country, has a direct and important bearing upon the economic and social problems of low wages and unemployment, poverty and dependency, and this is what a genuine vocational guidance program means—could it be fully developed, it might be of some assistance also in solving problems incident to our cheap and unwholesome recreation, our poor taste and mediocre culture.

Dr. Pruette in her stimulating book entitled: "Women and Leisure" says—

"Among our social ideals we must count both the right to leisure and the right to work. This much is certain in the midst of our fluctuating psychology, that every individual has need of a task, of a regular task. It should be one which is suited to his capabilities, one which calls forth his honest efforts, and in the fulfillment of which is secured the satisfaction which comes from achievement."

Even the simplest occupations offer satisfaction of achievement to the fellowship of co-workers. Emerson gave expression to our common knowledge that the tendency to activity is a fundamental psychological phenomenon when he said that a task is a life-preserver. We must add to the necessity for activity, and the opportunity for self-expression in work, the ethical obligation to society which many now feel is universally involved in this matter, and the case for a "real job" is complete.

Extensive division of labor and a rising standard of living together with the development of science have led to the rapid growth of industry and commerce, and to an unprecedented expansion of the arts and professions in the last century. There are myriads of jobs today—jobs of sufficiently diverse character to demand the varied abilities of our people. Jobs too numerous to mention, with potentialities still untouched! The pressure for self-expression has never been so insistent as at present, and never have there been so many channels for it. Fields closed to women for generations have recently been opened, and an influx of trained women has come into business, law, medicine, architecture and art, social work, technical work in laboratories as well as in the industries arising from the subdivision of activities in the home.

Women's colleges and their graduates have not been slow in taking advantage of the new situation. College faculties and curricula have changed to meet the demands of their students and the world outside. The invidious distinction between cultural and vocational courses is rapidly disappearing as cultural courses become of vocational significance, and vocational courses acquire cultural values. The new spirit affects every phase of educational policy. Nor have Hollins faculty and alumnae been behind hand in this movement.

In a study of the social statistics of Hollins alumnae made in 1925, it was found that approximately three-fourths of all Hollins alumnae had been employed after leaving college. Although two-thirds of them were married, a large majority of these had been gainfully employed prior to marriage. The most common interval between leaving college and marriage was a two-to-three-year period. While the most popular vocation among Hollins graduates was teaching, a constantly increasing number was reported in the fields of journalism, social work, banking, insurance and other forms of business, home economics, library work, nursing, music and art. Many of these graduates are pioneers, blazing the trail for college girl in the South, and especially for Hollins students of today.

For the Class of 1926 a special message is reserved. Hollins has high hopes of your ability and willingness to meet your community's demand for your thought and energies. Much is expected of college women today, and justly so, for theirs is a rich heritage. May the love of learning and scholarship, pride in a job well done, and high ideals of good citizenship, which Hollins cherishes, bring you success in the great adventures before you!

Ruth Thompson was having difficulty in reading a passage in Latin, but, with the help of a friend behind her, she had succeeded in covering about half of it. Suddenly Dr. Smith, hearing the prompting voice, said, "Ruth, who is helping you?"

It was a moment for quick thinking, but Ruth was equal to it and raising her head, said, "No one, Dr. Smith, that was the self-pronouncing dictionary you advised me to buy."

The Midyear's Tragedy

'Twas the night before midyears, and all through the college
Each girl was distractedly searching for knowledge.
A study sign perched upon every door
Gave warning to wanderers to enter no more.
In one of the rooms on the third floor of West
A damsel sat working in dire distress.
Her hair was slicked back, her eyes are quite wild,
Around her a hundred large volumes were piled.
What have I done to deserve such "woe,"
She cried, "as an English exam and a Zoo,
Two upon the very same day!
To study them both, I can't see the way."
Then she'd pick up a book and glance it all o'er
And frantically toss it again on the floor,
When a thought chanced to enter her bright little head,
The memory of what her teacher had said:
"To get a good rest and to be quite ready
To take her exam with a mind sane and steady."
So blithely aside every book she did cast
And climbed into bed, to sleep at last.
When the next morning came she was happy and bright,
But upon her exam, she got nothing right.
If you rest and don't study you'll meet your downfall,
And this is the warning we give to you all.

Pat: "Good gracious, Elise, where'd you get that cold?"

Elise: "Sleeping in the wet. My bed springs give rise to the creaks."

Bobbie Hunt Burton in Literature I:
"Did Chaucer write Robin Hood?"

Jean Wolf: "No, he wrote 'Cranberry Tales.' "

* * *

Eloise Kelly before Philosophy class:
Ten more minutes till class time,
Haven't studied since last time.
I found a better pastime,
I much preferred to play.

Rastus: "Mandy, is you any relation to dat Rosa Jones?"

Mandy: "Distantly, only distantly. You see it happened dis way. Rosa's my maw's foteenth child and I'm her first."

Petitions on Campus

1. From those who indulge in hockey: That Dot Coulter be reminded that the object of the game is not to entirely annihilate the participants.
2. From Miss Tutwiler: That all doors of dormitory rooms be boarded up and students be required to use transoms as exits.
3. From the student body at large: That the Freshmen be suppressed.
4. From Sarah Williams: That Ruth Thompson be allowed only fifteen Freshmen in their room at a time.
5. From second floor West: That only twenty people be allowed to do the Charleston in one room at a time on third floor.

ONE HOUR AFTER INSPECTION

FIRE DRILL

Don't you hear that bell a ringing?
It's a fire drill!
To your bed you can't be clinging
At a fire drill.
You have got to rise and hurry,
It matters not your flurry
For there is no time to worry
At a fire drill.

Though the room may be quite frigid
At a fire drill.
The printed rules are rigid
For a fire drill.
Leap and quickly grab the light,
Just forget about your plight,
And shut the windows tight
At this fire drill.

Pick your coat from off the floor,
It's a fire drill.
With a towel, wait at the door,
It's a fire drill.
When the captain gives the sign
March two and two in line.
You cannot lay behind
At a fire drill.

Seniors' Lament

When you come to the end of a perfect term

And you sit all alone with your grades,

You look to the past

To get a glimpse for the last

Of some of the shadows and shades.

And everyone looks at and envies you,
too,

As down to the station you run

With some of the best,

Leaving the rest,

And start for vacation and fun.

THE KARUX.

The Ox Woman

On an East Indian farm, where the crop is tea, a wooden plow turns up the rich black soil. A woman drives, another woman pulls—and a black ox pulls beside her.

The electric light, the electric iron, the vacuum cleaner—the use of electricity on the farm for pumping water, for milking, and for the cream separator—are helping to make life happier.
General Electric research and engineering have aided.

Many American women often work as hard as their Oriental sisters. They toil at the washtub, they carry water, they churn by hand—all tasks which electricity can do.

The social significance of the release of the American woman from physical drudgery, through the increasing use of electricity in and about the home, will appeal instantly to every college man and woman.

What the Accompaniment is to Music This Store is to the Stylish Woman

BEFORE GETTING YOUR NEXT OUTFIT
READ THIS

How would you like to consult, for perhaps half an hour, with five of the leading style creators of New York in the selection of your own wardrobe?

How would you like to do away with the usual uncertainty and doubt as to what models you should choose for your own wearing?

To thousands of well-dressed women Carolyn Modes comes as the announcement of a great new service. Each one of these models is the unanimous choice of a group of five of the leading style authorities of New York—selected from all the thousands of new designs shown.

Here, at last, it is possible for you to choose with assurance. Any Carolyn model you select you may be certain is right. Among these creations one cannot go wrong.

Carolyn Modes are on display and sale at this store only, in this city and vicinity. All dresses are priced uniformly at $39.50—coats at $69.50.

Don't select your next costumes until you have seen these Carolyn Modes.
